The way we look after you is as important as the work we do.

We offer more than legal advice and get to know you first. It's why we're easy to reach when you need to reach us. And why you can talk to us about anything.

Nothing is too complex

We're trusted to handle complex children's matters, including internal and international relocations, cross-jurisdiction disputes, paternity issues, and cases involving allegations of substance misuse, domestic violence, or child abuse - always with care and expertise.

A diverse client portfolio

We are regularly instructed by high-net-worth individuals in respect of 'protective' work such as pre-nuptial agreements. Typically, these cases included inherited wealth and/or a second marriage where a substantial portion of an individual's wealth has accumulated pre-marriage.

We also help and advise clients when their relationships have broken down, divorce cases can be complex, sometimes due to the types of assets to be shared. If clients have diverse portfolios including the likes of business interests, rental property portfolios, pensions, investments (including 'crypto') art and antiques, then understanding these complexities is essential.

Collaboration is key

At the heart of what we do is a commitment to finding fair and practical resolutions for our clients. Whether navigating divorce, separation, asset division, or arrangements for children, our team's goal is to deliver outcomes that feel right. Collaboration between parties is our preferred route, backed by the expertise of our specialists.

It's this dedication to amicable solutions that sets us apart, though we're equally skilled in taking a firm stance when needed. From courtrooms to collaboration tables, we bring empathy, expertise, and a shared desire to help families move forward confidently. This approach enables all parties to reach agreements, fostering a positive outcome, especially where children are involved.
